Latitude to Demonstrate LatitudeLearning.com, its Open-Source LMS at Learning Solutions Event

State of the Art On-Demand, Open-Source LMS Introduces Training Companies to 21st Century Technology

SALINE, Mich., March 9, 2010 – Latitude Learning, provider of the industry leading open-source learning management system (LMS) LatitudeLearning.com, today announced it will exhibit at the Learning Solutions conference and expo March 24-26, 2010, in Booth 309 at the Hilton in the Walt Disney World Resort.

Since 2002, the eLearning Guild's annual gathering has been the preeminent resource for e-Learning professionals, attracting leaders in the industry. Attendees focus on the latest trends in design, development, production, acquisition, distribution, and/or management of e-Learning.

Latitude Learning will provide in-booth demonstrations of the world class, open-source LMS portal hosted at www.latitudelearning.com. This state of the art, open-source LMS, originally developed for global Fortune 50 companies, is now available to training companies on an on-demand basis to host their proprietary learning classes and manage student records. Additionally, Latitude Learning is providing access to 75 Global Mindset e-learning courses tuition free for all clients. The LatitudeLearning.com LMS enables training companies to literally propel their Internet presence to a world class standard for training functionality and effectiveness.

“Training companies face tougher challenges than ever before, and this is an ideal opportunity for the industry to see the benefits of a superior, comprehensive LMS,” noted Latitude CEO Jeff Walter. “Attendees will see how they can easily leverage a world class LMS to elevate their company and provide greater value to their clients – without the burden of large, up-front development costs.”
