An Extended Enterprise LMS May Be For You

You may need some powerful stuff! An extended enterprise LMS should be considered if you plan on educating multiple audiences. Features allow you to manage content, users, customization, branding and rules for each audience. A learning platform equipped with robust features may better serve your training program and community.

An Employee LMS May Be For You

An employee LMS is perfect for organizations that are only considering training immediate employees. The single hierarchy structure in which these types of LMSs are built for work great for Human Resources. Easily track compliance, integrate with recruiting and HR information systems, build career development paths and electronically manage succession planning.

An Academic LMS May Be For You

Managing the scheduling of classrooms, teachers and students outside of a virtual environment requires a lot of data exchange. For this reason, an academic LMS is your best fit. It provides rich functionality in order to maintain virtual and physical classrooms. They also allow for instructors to collect assignments, post grades and communicate with students and parents.
